2014 NASOMA Yearbook
Fungoes Championship
Edition

FUNGOES WIN 2014 NASOMA CROWN.

NON-USE OF STEROIDS ALLEGED!

Despite the ability of super-star pitchers Clayton Kershaw, David Price, and Matt Harvey to consistently shut down the opposition and the Ruthian hitting exploits of Mike Trout, the championship of the vaunted 2014 Fungoes has been tainted by allegations of non-steroid use. Exclusive photos (below) taken at an undated Fungoe game show an unnamed player after lack-of-steroid treatments. Opposition complaints include inability (or unwillingness) to follow the ball when said person was pitching, and fielders tripping on their tongues when fielding weakly hit rollers in the infield. The mesmerizing of the defense continued when watching this person on the basepaths, as she led all of NASOMA in stolen bases since no one wanted her to stop running.

League officials, commenting under condition of anonymity, said, “Nnnnn ggww (drool),” followed by a heavy sigh.

From the Commish

A discussion that has taken place for a number of years has been is Strat-O-Matic baseball like real life baseball. I know a number of arguments have often been made that a good real-life baseball player may not be a good Strat-O player and vice versa.

Over the years I think the gap between real life and Strat-O has actually narrowed in my mind. The first evidence of that was when sabermetrics really started to get noticed and used by baseball team. Taking situation statistics seriously and looking at match-up probabilities are a big part of Strat-O. They are now a big part of major league baseball.

Recently, major league baseball has seen more and more exaggerated shifts. This is particularly in the infield, but outfield shifting is getting more extreme as well. The result has been that many dead pull hitters have seen a noticeable decline in batting average. Again this is similar to Strat-O in that it is all about putting your team in the best probable match up in a given situation.

My point is that Strat-O and major league baseball may not be that much different at all. What do you think?

Thanks to everyone for making 2014 another successful season for NASOMA. Games and stats were turned in on time and we were able to hold a great playoffs. Congratulations to all the playoff teams and especially the Fungoes for winning the NASOMA crown.

My thanks to each of you for your continued contributions to NASOMA. My wishes are for another great season in 2015.

“I don’t know why people like the home run so much. A home run is over as soon as it starts...wham, bam, thank you, ma’am. The triple is the most exciting play of the game. A triple is like meeting a woman who excites you, spending the evening talking and getting more excited, then taking her home. It drags on and on. You’re never sure how it’s going to turn out.”
